MAYOR LEADS MOB

Mexican Rioters Destroy
Consular Building
At Torreón

Special Cable to The China Press

New York, June 28.—It is understood here that boats carrying munitions to Europe have been stopped and are being escorted back to New York and Boston.

Reuter's Service.

Washington, June 27.—President Carranza has indirectly suggested mediation to the United States.

London, June 27.—America is tightening the screw on Mexico and is considering the stoppage of imports into that country.

Refugees who have arrived at the frontier report that a mob, led by the Mayor, destroyed the American Consulate at Torreón.

Distribution of U.S. Troops

Japanese papers carry the following late telegrams:

San Francisco, June 18.—The American troops in Boston have been mobilized and are marching to the Mexican frontier. At present, 3,500 American troops are at Nampiquipa, 1,500 at Bahicora, 500 at San Miguel, 500 at Madera, 500 at Garena, 3,000 at Casas Grandes, 500 at Calaricos, 500 at Ascension and 34,500 on the frontier, the total being 46,000. The Carranza army has 12,000 troops in Sonora, 40,000 in Chihuahua and 15,000 on the frontier, the total being 67,000.

South American Comment

New York, June 19.—A Buenos Ayres telegram states that the report of the mobilization of the American troops has attracted keen attention there and in other parts of South America. The people in South America generally think that the mobilization of troops in the United States affords proof of an American scheme to extend her territory or at least to assert a protectorate over Latin-American countries, and a serious anti-American feeling has been awakened.

The Government authorities and the better classes, however, have taken a different view, and they do not doubt the intention of President Wilson. They think that war may break out between America and Mexico, but the United States will never attempt to wrest territory from Mexico. They believe that President Wilson will make an announcement to the South American countries on the matter.

Many Americans Murdered

San Francisco, June 20.—It is reported that many Americans have been murdered at the Cerralvo Nuevo mine in Mexico.

Germany Wants a War?

San Francisco, June 22.—Germany is watching with great interest the development of the situation between the United States and Mexico. According to reports from Berlin there are two stories in circulation in Germany regarding the American-Mexican relations. One is that Japan is helping the Mexicans and the other says that any war between the United States and Mexico will be beneficial to Germany, because the United States will become unable to supply the Allies in Europe with munitions. The Germans are said to be working for a war, which cannot be fought without some effect upon the war situation in Europe.—Nichi-Nichi.

San Francisco, June 22.—Advices from El Paso say that, according to an official report to the Mexican Consulate there, in the engagement at Carrizal the Americans lost a captain and eleven soldiers, and on the Mexican side General Gomez and thirteen others were killed. Besides, 17 American soldiers, 20 horses and 20 rifles were captured by the Mexicans. The American prisoners are now being sent to the city of Chihuahua.—Asahi.

Negro Cavalry in Fight
San Francisco, June 22.—According to an official report from General Trevino, he, acting upon an order from General Obergon, issued an order to General Gomez, which brought about the engagement between the American and Mexican forces. On the American side a negro cavalry force took part in the engagement.—Asahi.

Minister of Navy Resigns; Connection With Monarchy Disapproved by the South

River Traffic Barred for 40 Days While Northern Troops Are Evacuating Szechuen; Yuan's Funeral

Reuter's Pacific Service to The China Press

Peking, June 28.—Admiral Liu Kuang-hsiung tendered his resignation on the 22nd. It is understood this is owing to his connection with the monarchy movement and consequent dissatisfaction in the South.

Hsu Yun-yuen, the Deputy Auditor-General, has been appointed Governor of the Bank of China.

The obstacle in the way of the release of the salt surplus, owing to the French claim for the payment of interest to the French holders of Lunghai railway bonds, which has not been paid for two years, out of the surplus, has been satisfactorily removed. The French have agreed to the proposal made by the Chinese to pay one-fourth immediately and the remainder by instalments.

The salt surplus, amounting to about Tls. 5,000,000, excluding $1,400,000 in bank-notes lying at Canton, will probably be released tomorrow.

Chen Yi Leaves Chengtu

Chengtu, June 26.—Chen Yi left this morning. General Chow Chun will take up the post of Governor of Szechuen tomorrow.

The majority of the present officials will remain in office. The leaders of the western rebels are recognized as colonels. It is expected that Liu Cheng-ho will receive an important post.

General Chow Chun brings $800,000 to relieve the situation.

Sianfu, June 27.—The ex-Chiang-chun, Lu Chien-chang, left today, accompanied by General Chen, after residing at the English Baptist Mission premises for a month, waiting for a safe-conduct to Tungkwan. Sianfu is quiet. The Yulin district is much disturbed and the outlying districts are suffering from tuel.

Trade is at a standstill. The banks are closed and the roads still difficult.

Yuan's Imposing Funeral

Reuter's Pacific Service to The China Press
Peking, June 28.—The funeral ceremonies in connection with the removal of the remains of Yuan Shih-k'ai began at 6 o'clock this morning, when, after President Li Yuan-hung had tendered his condolence, the chief mourner, Yuan Ko-ting, announced the removal of the coffin, which was carried out of the Hual-jen Hall and placed on a small bier carried by thirty-two bearers. Meanwhile, the chief mourner placed the tablet of the deceased in a sedan-chair, while servants removed the scrolls, banners, robes, decorations, wreaths, etc., from the hall and placed them also in sedan-chairs.

The coffin was carried on the small bier to Hsinhua-men, where the President bowed as it passed and then returned to his office. The coffin was then transferred to a large bier, covered with a red silk canopy and carried by eighty bearers.

At Hsinhua-men, which is the main entrance to the Presidential quarters, a procession was formed and the Secretary of State, a representative of the Ching house, the members of the Cabinet and a number of the principal officials, including some foreigners, joined the cortege, which proceeded eastwards as far as Tienan-men, where the Diplomatic Corps joined it. The procession then turned southwards down the magnificent broad stone road to the Chunghua-men, where the Diplomatic Corps, the representative of the Imperial Ching house and many of the officials left the procession, which passed through the Chunghua-men and Chien-men, turned to the right and entered the Peking-Hankow railway station.

The procession was extremely picturesque and in many respects a curious mixture of Chinese and foreign styles. According to Chinese custom, the mourners walked ahead of the coffin, the chief mourner being immediately in front of it. The leading portion of the procession consisted of banner-bearers, military and naval guards of honor, several bands, both Chinese and foreign, the latter playing the Dead March from "Saul" and also Chopin's Funeral March.

The ceremonial chair was escorted by mounted guards. The President's horse, priests and Lamas followed. Then came the sedan-chair containing the tablet, followed by the robes, decorations, etc. Following these, were seen prominent officials in frock coats or evening dress, military officers, the Diplomatic Corps in uniform, the members of the Cabinet and the late President's sons. The latter were dressed entirely in white and walked under a white canopy, each supported by two attendants.

The huge coffin, covered with a beautiful red silk canopy, on the red bier carried by eighty bearers dressed in green, presented a splendid and impressive spectacle. After the coffin came a number of lady mourners, in chairs.

The coffin reached the station about 10.30, where it was entrained, with the mourners, the deceased's tablet, the wreaths, decorations, etc. The train departed some time later, when a salute of 101 guns was fired and all the temples in Peking tolled their bells 101 times.

Grand Shereef's Army Is Besieging Medina

Tells Enver He Is Ignorant Youth, Who Has Dragged Turkey to Destruction

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Cairo, June 28.—It appears that the Grand Shereef of Mecca has raised three armies, the commands of which he gave to his three eldest sons. The first is besieging Medina, the second occupied Taif, capturing most of the Turkish garrison and the third captured Jeddah, with its garrison, a battery of field-guns, quick-firers, rifles and much ammunition.

The Shereef's followers have cut the telegraphs, uprooted the Hedjaz railway and destroyed the stations for 150 kilometers northward, to prevent Turkish re-inforcements being sent.

It is related that, when Enver Pasha visited the Hedjaz, the Grand Shereef told him he was an ignorant youth who has dragged Turkey to destruction.

London, June 27.—In the House of Lords, Earl Cromer emphasized the importance of the Grand Shereef's rising against Turkey. The Marquis of Crewe said that, as soon as the Turkish Government came under German control, it ceased to truly represent Islamism and the possibility of a rising was obvious and should not surprise true Moslems. "We could not refuse our sympathy to those endeavoring to throw off an alien yoke."

Seven Villa Bandits Captured, Tried and Condemned

The seven prisoners pictured above were captured by American troops. They were tried, convicted and found guilty of being members of the band of Villista raiders that surprised and attacked the Americans at Columbus, N. M., and killed several troopers and citizens. The photograph was made in Deming jail yard.

Hawks Pott has for his subject "The Court and American Influence," and Mr. Edwin S. Cunningham, American Consul-General at Hankow, will speak on "The Court Below." Minister Reinsch's subject is one of very general interest, being "The Diplomatic Side of the Extra-territorial Court."

The program will be diversified with "American Songs" by Mr. R. A. Currie, and "Songs of the Pacific Paradise" (Hawaii), by Mr. M. L. Heen, accompanied by a Hawaiian quartette.

Seating arrangements are now practically completed, but any Americans desiring to attend who have not already secured tickets may obtain them from Mr. Earl B. Rose, at the U. S. Court for China. The dinner will assemble promptly at eight o'clock in the banquet hall of the Astor House Hotel.

Rincon and Barretto Released from Court

$1,500 due on Alleged Worthless Checks from Fillipinos Is Paid

M. Rincon and E. E. Barretto were released by the American Consular Court yesterday after the suit charging them with obtaining goods under false pretenses had been settled. It was charged that the accused gave worthless checks for $1,500 worth of jewelry and clothing purchased from Shanghai merchants. It is understood that the money has been paid and the merchants satisfied. Rincon is said to be the son of a Manila banker and Barretto a former lieutenant in the island constabulary. They were arrested in Tientsin and brought to Shanghai for trial.

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 26.—In the House of Commons, today, Lord Robert Cecil announced that an American official report showed that the Germans had reduced the food supplies to British prisoners at Ruhleben to half the necessary amount. His Majesty's Government has consequently proposed to Germany to exchange the British prisoners at Ruhleben for the same number of German civilian prisoners in England. If Germany does not accept this proposal within a week, Britain will consider steps regarding the rations of German civilian prisoners in England.

HIOKI LEAVING CHINA; HAYASHI MAY RETURN

Chang Tsung-hsiang New Minister to Tokio; Appointment
Objected to by South

Reuter's Pacific Service to The China Press

Peking, June 28.—The appointment of Chang Tsung-hsiang as Minister to Tokio is confirmed, also the news that Mr. Hioeki has been recalled, at his own request and that Baron Hayashi is his probable successor. Mr. Hioeki will probably leave in the middle of July.

It is understood that the double change has no political significance. Chang Tsung-hsiang is at present Minister of Education. He is a graduate of the Imperial University, Tokio and a good Japanese scholar, therefore his appointment seems suitable, but it is believed that the Southern leaders are strongly opposed to his appointment, owing to his connection with the Yuan Government. It is understood that the Chinese Government is at present sounding the Japanese Government on the matter.

Baron Hayashi was Minister at Peking from 1906-08.

Crown Prince Launches Attack Against Fleury Which Is Repulsed

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, June 27.—The official communique issued yesterday evening announced a continued lull at Verdun, with decreased artillery activity on both sides of the Meuse. For the first time for weeks, except at Hill 304, there was no infantry action today.

The French artillery in the Champagne wrecked the enemy's works at Ville-sur-Tourbe. Our batteries in the Vosges exploded two ammunition depots at Chapelle.

The communique this afternoon reported: Night operations enabled us to enlarge the ground we have gained at Thiaumont. There was another keen engagement at Fleury, but the position is unchanged.

The communique this evening reported: There was a moderate bombardment on both banks of the Meuse. At two o'clock in the afternoon, the Germans launched an attack against our part of Fleury and were completely repulsed.

London, June 27.—General Sir Douglas Haig yesterday reported increasing activity. A number of successful enterprises were carried out last night at different points of the front. The hostile lines were penetrated at ten different places.

Our parties inflicted considerable casualties on the enemy. Ours, everywhere, were very slight. The Royal Munster Fusiliers and the Australians and New Zealanders were particularly successful.

There was much artillery activity in connection with these raids, on both sides, yesterday evening and last night.

Our artillery was very active against the hostile trenches, which were considerably damaged at many places. Our heavy artillery caused four large explosions in the enemy's rearward lines near Pozieres.

Today, our artillery was again active at numerous points, considerably damaging the hostile defensive works, notably at Longueval, Givenchy-en-Gohelle, north of the Loos salient, opposite Wytschaete and east of Wietje.

General Haig reported today:—Last night, south-east of Ypres salient, a German attack was repulsed. Our patrols were very active on the whole front, entering the enemy's lines at numerous points and inflicting many casualties.

Mine-fighting occurred near Loos, in which the Leinsters heavily punished the enemy.

Numerous hostile air-craft were encountered yesterday, on the enemy's side of the line. Five of our machines engaged four Fokkers, two of which were brought down.

Two others were grounded elsewhere. The British casualties were one machine missing.

THAT OVERNIGHT STORY DIDN'T INTEREST JUDGE

Prisoner Explained Everything
Except Why He Assaulted
Chinese Policeman

R. E. Gorham, marine engineer, was rolling down the Whangpoo Road yesterday aboard a ricksha. It had been a stormy night and the motion of the vessel put R. E. to sleep. The craft was tacking around a corner when a Chinese constable noticed the unconscious figure and tapped it on its arm. Gorham awoke with a start, saw what it was that had awakened him and is alleged to have then and there maliciously struck the said constable with intent to do him bodily harm.

Gorham was immediately brought before the American Consular Court on the charge. Having heard the evidence against him the prisoner leaned familiarly over the judge's desk and leered at him in perfect friendliness. He took the oath in a carefree manner and started his testimony with a neglected right hand still in the air.

"Are you guilty of this assault or not?" asked the court.

"Well, it was like this, y'honner," said Gorham. "Last night I left my ship—"

"I don't care about last night. Did you commit the assault on the constable alleged?"

"Left my ship," continued the accused solemnly, "and got two rickshas. I put my—"

"Do you plead guilty or not guilty?" "I put my luggage in one ricksha and I put myself in the other. When—"

"Put him in the jail and bring him up tomorrow afternoon," said the court, having lost all patience.

"I put myself in the other," continued the prisoner, as Marshal Williams led him off to the dungeon. "I admit I got a little tired because the night before me and some friends—"

But the key had turned in the lock and there was no-one near to listen to his story. So the prisoner hung his hat on the floor and went off into a resounding slumber.

Baldwin's Bail Bond Is Declared Forfeited

Fails to Answer Case in U. S.
Court; Warrant Is Asked
For His Arrest

No-one was surprised yesterday afternoon when the case against A. M. Baldwin was called in the United States Court for China and the defendant did not appear. Baldwin was charged with the misappropriation of $25,000 given him by agents of the Republicans for the purchase of arms. After a practical collapse of the case the complainant withdrew his charge and Baldwin was released on his personal bond. He then left Shanghai, supposedly for America.

Mr. J. B. Davies, representing Baldwin, was in court yesterday but made no statement. The accused's bail was declared forfeited. This bond was signed by Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin only. Major C. P. Holcomb, District Attorney, made application for a bench warrant on which Baldwin will be arrested should he return to Shanghai.

FIRE BRIGADE SOUVENIR

The Shanghai Fire Department has issued a handsome book as a souvenir of the 50th anniversary jubilee held recently. All profits made by the sale of this booklet will be used for the benefit of Shanghai firemen at the front. Copies may be obtained from foremen of the different companies for $2.

The cover bears the motto: "We fight the flames." The book contains an interesting history that goes back to the formation of the brigade in 1866 and even before that. The first fire was in 1862. After this there were a good many others and the city finally decided that something ought to be done. Something was and the Fire Brigade was formed in 1866.

The souvenir contains pictures of firemen, past and present, old and new equipment, historic blazes, fire stations, etc. It also contains the war cries of the companies. That of No. 1 is worthy of note, as showing the vigor of the brigade's former methods. The motto is: "Say the word, and down comes your house!"

'The Hypocrites'

Owing to insistent clamor on the part of the populace, Mr. Mike Newman has arranged to continue the run of Hypocrites at the Victoria Theater. The picture was to close tonight but since the house was sold up early yesterday evening and irate persons were sending threatening chits unless the run continued, he finally agreed. The picture will be shown Friday, Saturday and Sunday. To add to the effect of certain parts of the film a large organ has been installed in the theater. When asked last night whether he was going to put any clothes on N. Truth in the picture, Mr. Newman answered as follows: "No!"

Austria's Real 'Dogs of War' Are Found Useful

The Austrian war office has just issued a public appeal for dogs for service in the field in scouting and sanitary work. The dogs have proved of such value that more are needed. This picture shows an Austrian Red Cross squad with dogs on the Italian front.

Sir H. de Sausmarez Gives Champion's Belt To Cathedral School

Brodie, Ma., Holds It For First

Dr. Patrick then told the boys that he was there that morning to represent the St. Andrew's Society. Each year this patriotic society held an examination for children of Scottish parents and this year the Cathedral School had won the first bursary of $100 which he was pleased to present to Walker together with a certificate and a copy of Burns' works. Dr. Patrick also gave copies of Scottish works to Brodie, ma., Brodie, ml., Macdonald and Donald, ma.

Sir Havilland de Sausmarez then presented a handsome championship belt—which had been specially made in England—to Brodie, ma., who this year had won the championship in the School sports. The belt, which has the school arms on a silver clasp, is so made that each year the winner may have his name placed on a silver bar.

The Dean in thanking Sir Havilland for his present to the school said that in a hundred years time, when the belt was composed of bars only, the pupils of the school would then remember the school's first chairman and one of its founders. Cheers for every-one present brought a pleasant function to a close.

Tonight, you will have a chance to see the girl students of the McTyndre School in a reproduction of "The Princess." The performance will take place at the Olympic Theater, starting at 9 o'clock.

This afternoon at 5.30 the students of St. Francis Xavier's College will be presented with their certificates and prizes.

Fuh-tan College graduation exercises of both the college and preparatory departments, also are fixed for Saturday, July 1, at 4 p.m. As a preliminary there will be a boy scout inspection at 3 p.m. The college is situated at Siccawei.

The Shanghai American School held its graduating exercises two weeks ago, and broke up for their summer holidays on June 16.

The Public School for Boys ought to have its annual prize giving some time this month, but owing to the delayed arrival of the prizes, it will be held either at the end of July, or early in September.

The annual prize distribution in connection with the French Municipal School, No. 247 Avenue Joffre, will take place at 4 p.m. on Saturday, July 1.

On July 6 comes the annual commencement of the Government Institute of Technology, otherwise known as Nanyang College. This function commences at 2 p.m.

The Public, Hanbury, and St. Xavier's schools break up tomorrow and resume study in September.

The closing exercises of the Hsing-

PRESBYTERIAN VOTE FOR UNION INQUIRY

Assembly Provides Committee To Make Investigation And
Report in 1917

TO NAME 7 COMMISSIONERS

Status of All Theological Institutions of the Denomination To Be Settled

Atlantic City, N. J., May 25.—The one hundred and twenty-eighth General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, which is scheduled to adjourn here tomorrow, today voted unanimously to postpone action on the charges against Union Theological Seminary pending an investigation by a committee to be appointed and instructed to report to the assembly of 1917.

The report of the Committee on Bills and Overtures recommending this proceeding was adopted without discussion. Thus was the troublesome Union Seminary matter disposed of for at least a year, and, incidentally, the adopted report aims at the fixing of the relations of all Presbyterian theological seminaries to the Church, so that never again shall a successor to the Union case arise. The status of Auburn Seminary, which has resolved to follow in Union's footsteps in withdrawing from the control of the Church, will be decided upon when the Union case is disposed of.

The whole question is whether what is known as "the compact of 1870" between the seminaries and the Church is "legally enforceable." By this compact Union, Auburn, Princeton, and a number of other Presbyterian seminaries acknowledged the authority of the General Assembly to approve or reject elections of their faculties. In 1892 Union withdrew from this compact, and in 1915 the General Assembly acknowledged its right to withdraw. Some of the leaders of the Presbyterian Church take the attitude, however, that action of the assembly of 1915 should be rescinded and that Union should be made to submit again to the compact of 1870, through which orthodox teaching could be enforced, or else surrender the funds collected between 1870 and 1892. It is asserted by some that, since its withdrawal in 1892, Union has become a hotbed of heresy, and as such should not administer what were Presbyterian funds.

The Report on Union Seminary
The report of the Committee on Bills and Overtures, which was adopted as the first step in settling all questions in the case, was as follows:

In answer to overtures dealing with interpretation of the so-called compact of 1870 and its implications, and raising certain inferential questions as to the relation of all our theological seminaries, the appointment of Professors, the character of their teaching, and the Presbyterian oversight of candidates for the ministry to the General Assembly and to the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

We recommend that a special committee of seven, four Elders and three ministers be appointed by the Moderator to take under consideration the questions that have been raised as to the action of the General Assembly of 1915 regarding this compact of 1870, especially as to the bearing of this action upon the legal status of all our seminaries, and also to investigate the whole subject of the relationship of those seminaries to the Church and to the assembly and to each other, to advise as to any proceedings or actions which may be necessary to safeguard existing relationships or to make these relationships more secure, uniform, and mutually helpful and to report to the next assembly.

The Rev. Dr. John A. Marquis,

Moderator of the assembly, is expected to name the committee of seven tomorrow. At least three of the four lay members, it is expected, will be lawyers whose opinions in all legal matters will be valuable.

The resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors of Auburn Seminary have been under consideration of the Standing Committee in Theological Seminaries, and when this committee reports it will probably recommend that the resolutions be referred to the committee of seven provided for in the report of the Committee on Bills and Overtures.

The Auburn resolutions state that the Directors of the seminary "accept the interpretation of the compact of 1870 laid down by the General Assembly of 1915. The resolutions further bear testimony to unbroken fellowship between the seminary and the assembly" and reaffirm the "declaration of loyalty" of the seminary. It is further agreed in the resolutions that the Faculty of the seminary shall "report annually" to the assembly.

Hallstorm Causes Suspension
The assembly, whose sessions had not been disturbed by all of the difficulties of alleged heresies and bigotries in conflict, was forced into a ten-minute suspension of business this afternoon by a hailstorm. The Rev. Dr. Julius B. Remensnyder of New York, a representative of the Lutheran Church, was speaking on church unity when it began to hail. Dr. Remensnyder kept on talking, but the hailstones kept on falling, and they fell in ever and ever larger sizes with greater and greater clatter on the roof of the music hall, on the sea end of the steel pier where the 900 Commissioners were assembled.

Dr. Remensnyder was not a quitter, but when he was the only person in the room who could hear what he had to say, and he not very well, he stopped talking—and the Commissioners rushed to windows to watch the splash of the hailstones in the Atlantic Ocean. But only a few could reach the windows, and the remainder decided not to yield ignominiously to the bombarding force. So they started to sing. Without any one's announcing the hymn a group opened up with "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord," and every one in the hall had joined in. This hymn concluded, the Commissioners continued singing, passing to "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," and the volume of voices was greatest in the line "Our helper He amid the flood of mortal ills prevailing."

The Commissioners sang so lustily that the hall could not make itself heard in the hall, and it stopped falling. Dr. Remensnyder then resumed his speech.

Foreign Missionaries Report
Foreign missionaries told of their work at this morning's session of the assembly and their reports held the attention of the Commissioners from beginning to end. The Rev. Dr. George Dunlop, missionary to the Philippines, asserted that to give independence to the islands now "would be to invite for them the fate of Belgium, Serbia, or Mexico." The Rev. Charles L. Thompson, Secretary of the Home Missionary Society, stated that 17,000,000 persons in the Andes Mountains were "sinking into paganism" because of insufficient workers in the field.

The Rev. W. T. Johnson from Japan reported that the Japanese felt that the United States had not "played fair" with them in the exclusion and land matters; and the Rev. John E. Williams from China said this country should be "patient with China."

"The Committee of Foreign Missions reported that its total income for the last year was $2,287,398; that the standing debt had been reduced from $101,000 to $40,000, and that the total assets were $6,408,000.

Speakers representing other denominations here and abroad addressed the assembly this afternoon, and pleas from ministers of Belgian and Armenian churches were heard.

These Executive Commissioners of the Assembly were elected for three-year terms this afternoon: The Rev. Dr. William R. Taylor of Rochester, A. A. Hyde of Wichita, Kan.; John A. Manson, of New Haven, Nathan G. Moore, of Chicago and the Rev. Dr. John A. Marquis, Moderator of the Assembly ex officio. Joseph A. Stevenson was elected for one year to fill an unexpired term.

LOST SHIP BELL HUSHED BY MANY CASUALTIES

Lloyd's Signal Is Never Rung
Now Except When An Overdue Vessel Reaches Port

London, May 10.—Several of the bigger groups of underwriters have dropped out of business at Lloyd's recently, to stand the speculation and uncertainty of modern underwriting of ships and cargoes. "You would think, I suppose," said one of them, "that it is the 'war risks' that are bothering us. But ordinary 'sea risks' are quite as great a factor now. Ship crews are not so good. The best sailors are with the navy. Then, navigation is more complex. Lights and buoys are fewer. Ships, moreover, are being used now often in trades for which they are not built, on routes for which they are not fitted."

"We have stopped ringing the Latine Bell (the old ship's bell at Lloyd's formerly rung to announce casualties and overdue ship's arrivals) when a casualty is reported, and only ring it now for the arrival of overdue ships. I suppose the ringing for casualties becomes monotonous."

"How do the underwriters take it? You never see the flicker of an eyelid, my boy. Most of these underwriters have about as much range of facial expression to signal a loss as an old sailing ship's figurehead. They never budge. If their feet get cold inside their boots, no one knows it."

"Plums? Oh, yes. We have plums sometimes as well as losses. Last week there was a little schooner from Brazil, I think, very much overdue. Thinking of recent weather and things, I took a risk on her for 15 per cent. premium, standing to lose 5 per cent. if she never turned up. But she came in safe and good. Two things on the Latine Bell sounded. 'There's an overdue arrived,' he said, hurrying away. 'Some one else is in luck.'"

□ This diagram shows the location of direct reflected lights and their wattage. Sixteen 100-watt direct reflected units. Note the great amount of wiring necessary under the old system.

□ Brascolites were installed: Four 250-watt units. Result—far better illumination. The wiring and fixtures (everything) cost less than the wiring only in the other plan.

An Englishman's Poland Experiences

John Morse Writes from the Standpoint of a Soldier Fighting in The Russian Ranks—Recent Books on the War

In the Russian Ranks: A Soldier's account of the Fighting in Poland. By John Morse. New York: Alfred A. Knopf. $1.50 (gold). A new and unusual phase of war experience, with many features of value, is presented in this account of how an Englishman traveling in Germany escaped at the beginning of the war into Russian Poland, and, aroused by the brutalities he witnessed, entered the Russian Army and fought with it for almost a year. Business and the desire for a holiday had taken Mr. Morse to Germany in July, 1914, and the last week of the month found him in a small German town a few miles from the Russian frontier. Everywhere as he went from city to city he found the towns crowded with soldiers, the country roads lined with cavalry and artillery, battalions having their full complement of men marching or entraining or being moved in long lines of cars. Being much interested in matters martial and loving, he says, the sight of armed men, he watched all these proceedings with attention. When he asked for the reason of all this activity he was told that the troops were being assembled for the autumn manoeuvres. Nothing that his questions caused him to be looked at with suspicion, he afterward kept silent.

An officer, more affable than the others, who lodged in the house of a German friend with whom he was staying, assured him on July 28 that war would be declared on the following Sunday against the Russians and the French, that the Germans would be joined by the Austrians, and that the German Army would be in Paris in a month. This officer and another continued their friendly attitude toward him and finally helped him across the frontier in the night of August 1. Mr. Morse declares of his own knowledge that the German Army was mobilized, "so far as the Russian frontier was concerned," more than a week before the order for its mobilization was given by the Kaiser.

In the Russian province of Kalisz, he found German troops burning, pillaging, murdering the inhabitants, devastating the land, several days before war was declared, and he was able to save his own neck only by the greatest care. He witnessed so many fiendish atrocities that his indignation waxed hot and instead of trying to make his way to Riga and thence to England he asked for a rifle as soon as he fell in with Russian troops, and thereafter took part in the fighting in Russian Poland and East Prussia through the first Fall and Winter of the war. He was taken prisoner by the Germans, from whom, with some others, he managed to escape, and, incapacitated by reason of frozen feet and other injuries, finally made his way, through many adventures, to England.

There are also many interesting accounts of the operations and life of the Russian troops, of their methods of warfare, and their characteristic. As he had spent eight years in the English Army and had been all his life a devoted student of military matters, he writes with expert knowledge. Up to the time when he crossed the frontier into Poland, he says, "I loved war and all that pertained to war; now I loathe it with an ineradicable hate and disgust, and hope never again to see ground crimsoned with blood."

Imperiled America

Imperiled America: A Discussion of the Complications Forced Upon the United States by the World War. By John Callan O'Laughlin, A. M., LL. D., Former Assistant Secretary of State; Secretary United States Commission to Japan; Member American Society of International Law. Chicago: The Reilly and Britton Company. $1.50 (gold).

Anybody who views with impatience the plea for "preparedness" that is being urged upon the country by the President and other patriotic persons will probably modify his opinions considerably if he reads with care Mr. O'Laughlin's survey of our international relations, responsibilities, and dangers. This survey is not the work of an alarmist, nor in any respect a sensational treatise; on the contrary, it is a sober and moderate exposition of our present standing in the world and of the problems that confront us, with an accompanying intimation that, if we are wise, we shall put ourselves in a state of preparedness that will enable us to handle all of our problems satisfactorily.

The author sees danger north, south, east, and west. His thought seems to be that it is hardly possible we shall go on for many years without getting into serious trouble if we neglect to provide ourselves with adequate defense. The showing he makes of our international relations fully justifies this view. The Monroe Doctrine, the Caribbean Sea problem, the Japanese contentions and intentions, trade conflicts with the European nations, encroachments of the belligerents of the present war on American rights, discontent on the part of the Central Powers and also of the Allies with our attitude with respect to the war, South American dislike and distrust of us, and the situation in Mexico are among the matters Mr. O'Laughlin regards as more or less perilous. The reasons he gives for his anxieties concerning these matters are sound and convincing. He does not say that if we go unarmed and "trust to luck" we shall come to grief; but he does say it is probable we shall deeply regret it if we remain unprepared, and his intelligent readers will agree with him.

There are some things in Mr. O'Laughlin's book to which exceptions will be taken. Friends of President Wilson will not fully indorse all that is said of the Administration's conduct of our European and Mexico relations, nor read with approval the comparisons between Mr. Wilson's way of doing things and that of Mr. O'Laughlin's friend, Colonel Roosevelt; but neither the criticism nor the comparisons are offensively made, and, as a matter of fact, they are for the most part mere repetitions of comments that have appeared in Republican and Progressive newspapers. Another thing that will hardly pass without dispute is the author's statement that this country has not one friend among the nations of the earth. This is a current saying with those who have literally accepted the reports of persons who have traveled in Europe since the war. It is an extravagant and a silly statement, and it has no place in a serious discussion.

Before And After 1914

Before, During and After 1914. By Anton Nystrom. Scribners. $2.50. A book dealing with the origin of the great war, appearing after it has been raging for nearly twenty months, needs some apology. But Anton Nystrom's "Before, During and After 1914" can abundantly justify itself. It may not tell us anything particularly new, and it must perforce go over the old facts, but the fact that it is written by a Swedish publicist of note gives its presentation of these familiar things a special significance. Sweden has been set down in the popular mind, apparently with justice, as the most pro-German of all the important neutrals; yet here is a Swede who writes as strongly against Germany as any Englishman or pro-ally American.

Mr. Nystrom, as Edmund Gosse relates in a preface, has been well known during his long life as both a physician and a sociologist. He has traveled much on the Continent of Europe and has inquired into the history as well as the existing conditions of the nations. Years ago he suggested that Germany should exchange Alsace and Lorraine for some of the French colonies, and so proposed a bargain which would have removed some of the most important cause of the war.

So when Mr. Nystrom came to the discussion of the great struggle he had an equipment of knowledge and thought which the majority of writers on the same subject might envy. He goes down to the basic things, and, after defining the meaning of racialism and showing its shortcomings and dangers, he traces the rival aims of the Slavs and the Germans through historic times.

It is in the tyrannical policy which Germany has displayed toward her neighbors, if they were weak enough, and to the subjected provinces of Poland, Schleswig, and Alsace and Lorraine, that Mr. Nystrom sees one of the chief causes of the war. Austria-Hungary followed the same method in her treatment of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and so set the match that exploded the powder magazine of Europe. Mr. Nystrom has no doubt whatever that a more liberal policy would have made the present war unnecessary and impossible, and as he recounts the excesses of the Germans in Belgium with quite as much indignation as any French or British writer, he derides his own countryman, Sven Hedin, and asks if he has taken leave of his senses to show the toadyism he has toward Germany.

Spies And Secret Service

Spies and Secret Service: The Story of Espionage, Its Main Systems and Chief Exponents. By Hamil Grant. Illustrated. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company.

Mr. Grant gives spies a very low rating, and supports his appraisal with an impressive body of expert opinion. He fully indorses the dictum of Napoleon that the spy is by nature a base character, and cites approvingly the conclusion to which the German special information departments are committed that a "white man," that is to say, a man of honor and rectitude, is worse than useless to the heads of the chief bureau of the Berlin Secret Service.

Karl Stiebu, reputed to be one of the profoundest technicians in the business of organizing spy campaigns, is quoted as saying the most valuable spy is the born aristocrat with a bad record and a worse reputation; and this view seems to agree with the practice of the German authorities of picking men of education and good manners for their important missions of espionage. Napoleon's practice was different. His greatest spy, Schulmeister, started life as a smuggler, and of his other spies he esteemed very highly criminals and peddlers.

In a summing up of his opinions with respect to the ethics of the spy Mr. Grant says that, no matter how interesting the study of the spy may prove in respect to the undoubted variety of the actors and of the dramatic aspects of their operations, it can only be held to be a criminological study. He does not openly acknowledge there may be exceptions to this pronouncement, but what he has to say of Nathan Hale may certainly be regarded as in substance a statement of an exception. The charge he brings against Hale is not that he was a criminal, but that he was a fanatic, and therefore, to some degree unsound in mind.

The specifications with which this charge is supported are not convincing, and it is doubtful that any American who examines them will be persuaded to accept Mr. Grant's estimate of the famous Revolutionary spy. It also will occur to Mr. Grant's American readers that the histories of the wars in which this country has been engaged afford numerous instances in which men and women of the highest character have served as spies, and without doubt it may be set down as an absolute fact that in America at least a "white man" may be an efficient and successful spy. Few Americans could be found who would take exception to the reply Nathan Hale made to his fellow-officers who tried to dissuade him from penetrating the British lines as a spy:

"I wish to be useful, and every kind of service necessary for the public good becomes honorable by being necessary. If the exigencies of my country demand a peculiar service, its claims to the performance of that service become imperious."

That certainly is sound doctrine, and the pride with which Americans cherish the memory of Hale shows it to be a well-established doctrine throughout the country. There is no good reason why it should not be an accepted doctrine all over the world.

Holland

A startling sum of American indebtedness to the Dutch is built up by H. A. Van Coenen Torchiana, Consul General of the Netherlands on the Pacific Coast, in a historical essay entitled "Holland, the Birthplace of American Political, Civic, and Religious Liberty." If we acknowledge the indebtedness we are forced to the conclusion that Holland, and not England, is America's mother country. The author makes a very good showing for the view that a great similarity existed between the civilization of America in her early years and the civilization of Holland. He also shows that the two countries today are in full agreement in their national ideals. His explanation is that Americans built their country after the Dutch model. (San Francisco: Paul Elder and Co., $1.25 gold.)

CHEMISE IN THE ARMY

Here is another of the wonders of British red tape. At kit inspection one of the subalterns in a British camp was surprised to see a lace and chiffon chemise among Private 200,000's belongings. The grinning private explained that it came back from the wash instead of his vest. The officer was puzzled what to do and finally the chemise pursued the following prescribed course.

It was condemned as being unfit for wear and then sent to the company quartermaster-sergeant for inspection. The sergeant exchanged it for what the private needed and the offending garment was passed on to the store with other "condemned" garments, where it remains in the possession of his Britannic majesty.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them with opiates. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria. Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better." JOHN J. LEPP, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"For several years I recommended your 'Castoria' and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. FARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies." VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy." A. F. FEELEY, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm." EDWARD PARRISH, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments." J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

In the Courts

The evidence in the opium case of the Hip Fong hong and H. Neotia and Company was finished in the British Supreme Court yesterday. Arguments will be heard this morning. Mr. H. P. Wilkinson appeared for plaintiffs and Mr. D. McNeill for defendants.

Further cross-examined Mr. Karanje said that, when the last talpan of the firm left, no instructions were given by him to witness as to plaintiff's contracts. It was more than likely that the departing manager took the books with him to be shroffed in India; that was the custom of the hong. Witness had a general power of attorney and also received special instructions in certain matters. Neotia and Co. of Shanghai received ¼ per cent commission on Bengal opium contracts.

When they got money on account of Combine sales it was remitted to India. The Indian office had the accounts and squared them up. The Chinese dealers took delivery in the latter part of 1914. Witness got an application from plaintiff at the beginning of 1914 but none after that. There were no outstanding contracts now, except those, the subject matter of the present case.

He carried on business with plaintiff about the Malwa opium contracts because he really did not know what had happened with regard to his Bengal opium contracts. Witness did not take part in any compromise about the present case. He did not start any negotiations.

Q.—I put it to you, an offer worth two lakhs has been made to settle the case.

A.—Not a single cent.

Q.—Opium to the value of that—thirty chests.

A.—I have heard of it.

Witness further said he had heard that the firm refused to settle with 20 chests but offered 18. There were people from the head office at present in Shanghai specially in connection with this matter. It might be that 30 chests was the number suggested and that the Calcutta office would not face that amount. The present market price was about Tls. 8,000 per chest.

Re-examined.—It might be that the offer of 18 chests was to include payment of the contract prices and all interest. He did not know very much about that matter. If plaintiff had come along in 1914 he could have had whatever money was due to him, if witness had instructions from India. The amount of plaintiff's Malwa opium contracts was very small—11½ chests altogether.

In answer to his Lordship witness said he thought the gentleman who was Shanghai manager when the contracts were cancelled did not give evidence in the Indian Commission because of a difference between himself and the firm's proprietors. He was now in the Bombay firm. The Calcutta and Bombay firms were separate. Witness did not know why there should be any ill-feeling between the two parties. The then manager left Shanghai with an ill-feeling against the Calcutta people. This was Calcutta business. Neotia and Co. of Shanghai was one business working for both the Calcutta and Bombay firms.

The Resurrection of Camille Desmoulins

WHEN Maximilian Harden is called a German Shaw, the title does not fit perfectly. The malice is there, but the differences are too wide. The displays of Puck-like devilry are terrific in the wounds they leave, and in this he is not a brother of Shaw, but a reincarnation of Camille Desmoulins. Camille made the enemy ridiculous and left him gasping with fury and unable to answer; but there was nothing slight or comic in the result; Camille slew. So does Harden.

In the current issue of Die Zukunft he deals with the starvation topic, and most of his article is taken up with a translation of Edmond de Concourt's description of the sufferings of Paris in the siege of 1870. It is all done with the perfectly innocent object, Harden assures his countrymen "what a burden of suffering and sorrow can be borne by a people determined to fight for freedom, for the right to govern themselves, and for honor." Who can object to that? And yet not even a German can read the translation without seeing what nonsense it is to charge the Allies with inhumanity or violation of the laws of war in a food blockade of Germany in 1914, when the Germans were guilty of still worse crimes in directly starving the Parisians in 1870.

The Reign of Terror suffered little from the heavy-handed attacks of sober-minded and grimly serious opponents. It felt a mortal blow when Camille Desmoulins began the publication of The Old Cordelier, the Zukunfts of that day. Why, even the method was the same—an innocent-looking and inoffensive translation, Camille translated from Tacitus, with the laudable purpose of instructing the public in history.

Only his translations were all of Tacitus' descriptions of a Reign of Terror in Rome, and his readers saw the stupid cruelties of their own rulers in a faithful and startling mirror, divested of all the false logic that masked them. There was only one possible answer to this, the guillotine; but the fatal blow had been struck, nevertheless, and after Camille had been silenced the mass of humbug and false reasoning which constituted the excuse for the Terror was dying on its feet; it had only four months to live.

The only answer that can be made to the reincarnated Camille of Berlin is to silence him. No mass of humbug and false reasoning can long withstand this weapon, the inescapable weapon that cannot be dodged or foiled, the weapon of Camille of Paris, of Maximilian of Berlin.

Building a Navy for Peace

THE Navy Bill presented to the House of Representatives yesterday is in most respects a great measure. It is great in its recognition of facts, great in its plans to meet them, great in its generosity and great in the confidence which it expresses in the determination of the people to spare neither labor nor money in safeguarding the honor and interests of their country.

Differing still, as they always have done, on the subject of standing armies, Americans are almost a unit in favor of a powerful navy. We are threatened by no foe on land. We know that with our first line of defense a formidable one, the danger of attack by sea will be made small.

It was a master-stroke to provide for five great battle-cruisers, a type of ship which seems destined to dominate the ocean for years to come, but it was a mistake to omit from the plan of construction the dreadnoughts still urgently needed.

If the provision of $360,934,293 (gold) for naval purposes in a single year staggers some of our people who have dreamed of universal peace, let them remember that Congress is now asked to meet a situation that resembles universal war. In the final adjustment of the issues involved in this conflict, an America prepared for emergency will be heard most respectfully in support of a true and lasting peace.

A Wild Mental Journey With Ford

History Is Myth, Two Bankers Invented This War, Flags Are Fatal and Preparedness Talk Is 'Scare Gas'

Henry A. Wise Wood, Chairman of the Conference Committee on National Preparedness, Vice President of the Aero Club of America, and until recently a member of the Naval Consulting Board (from which he resigned because he felt that the Administration was not doing what it should to prepare the United States for war) has interviewed Henry Ford. Here is his account of it, written for The New York Times:

By Henry A. Wise Wood

ON May 8, while in Detroit for the purpose of speaking on preparedness, I spent several hours with Henry Ford. I found Mr. Ford eager to talk about national defense, but unwilling to discuss it. While volleying his assertions with great rapidity, he refused to pause long enough to permit any one of them to be examined and dealt with. To facts which I submitted he responded with a brief word of dismissal or with a sweeping denial that they were facts; sometimes with the remark that he could not consider them because he himself did not know them to be facts.

In dealing with naval and military subjects his position seemed to be that they were to be tossed aside, because a civilian in presenting them was not to be credited, nor a professional to be trusted. Therefore they were not open to discussion. By this simple mental operation Mr. Ford shut out of the conversation all naval and military affairs. The suggestion that, because of the results of this war or the situation in Mexico, we might eventually find ourselves in international difficulties from which, owing to our weakness, we might be unable easily to extricate ourselves, Mr. Ford poo-pooed, saying that I was "full of Eastern scare gas."

When in our "discussion" of a nation's need for defensive strength, history was appealed to, Mr. Ford replied that he did not believe in history, that history was of the past and had no bearing upon the present, and that, there being nothing to be learned from it, history need not be studied nor considered. The American Revolution he refused to have touched upon, saying that the Revolution was "tradition," that he did not believe in tradition.

Coming to Mr. Ford's beliefs, which were given in fragments, with always his refusal to support them with evidence or to permit their analytical examination, these seemed to gather about a single thought. Mr. Ford's theory of wars—he granting no exceptions—was, or was on May 8, that they are created artificially by bankers. At the moment there are two bankers, but two, he believes, who are responsible for modern wars. If these be plucked then wars in our day will cease. Mr. Ford asserts he knows who these bankers are, and that he, personally, is going to see that the "tooth is pulled." He would not reveal the names of these bankers, nor explain the method by which he is to pull the tooth.

Mr. Ford asserted that he has found a permanent remedy for warfare, which he refused to reveal, saying that in due time I should learn what it is. This he said he would put into effect, but seemed unable to say when. When I sought to follow up these and other assertions equally vague I was invariably met by his refusal to divulge what he had in mind; I was adjured to wait and see. One clue to his thought may be got from his reply to my likening the external need for a defensive military force to the internal need for an armed police, which was that the police needed neither their clubs nor their revolvers; that the law could be enforced without any arms. Then, in the same breath, he asked if I was a Deputy Sheriff, saying that he and all of his men were Deputy Sheriffs, and that it was my duty also to be one.

When the word "patriotism" was touched upon Mr. Ford burst out with the assertion that he did not believe in patriotism, that no man is patriotic, and that the word patriotism is always the last resort of a scoundrel. To my inquiry as to what he would do in the event of war he replied that even if we were to be invaded he would not make a dollar's worth of arms for the United States. As I wished that there should be no mistake as to his meaning I put the question three times, and three times got the same answer.

Finally, I said: "Mr. Ford, on your roof are three American flags. On seeing them it hurt me to think that beneath them there was a man who is spending vast sums, amassed under their protection, to ruin the defenses of his country, and lay it open to a possibly hostile world." To this he replied: "When the war is over those flags shall come down, never to go up again. I don't believe in the flag; it is something to rally around."

In commenting upon my visit The Detroit Saturday Night aptly remarks: "Understanding Henry Ford is more than a puzzle; it is a pursuit."

Consul-Captain's London Chat

By Consul-Captain

Special Correspondence of The China Press

LONDON, May 21.—Today we all got up an hour earlier, so though the clock assured me that I splashed about in my tub at half past eight, it was really only half past seven, but as it was a real hot English summer day, I forgave the government and decided to keep the war going a while longer.

I've just had a delightful motor run from town out to the center of Epping Forest, and now I am penning these lines under the shade of a gallant, old oak tree. The joys of the country are all around, blackbirds and thrushes make merry and now and then a robin and a cuckoo join in. I also get some of the drawbacks of the country too in the shape of caterpillars who toy for the inside of my collar and mosquitoes who attack my ankles in "massed formation." When I say I motored here don't picture a Rolls-Royce or Napier. I came by every-one's motor car—the motor 'bus—and the charge was sevenpence paid to a good looking "conductorette" who was clad in the uniform of her profession, a sort of Norfolk coat, skirt reaching to just below her knees and boots and gaiters which only helped to accentuate the curves of her well-shaped legs.

Here in London we are able to gauge the popular trend of feeling towards the war better than perhaps anywhere else in England and as a wanderer who for years has lived in out of the way places and has perhaps got into the habit of rather looking with a sort of contempt on the stay-at-home, I now apologise. The stay-at-home is showing a new side of his character. What country, I wonder, besides our own would have taken the Irish affair at its proper value as "just the sort of thing those Irishmen would do; they can't resist a row." I've known a lot of Irishmen and they are rare handy fellows to have by when one is in a tight corner. I like the style of "knocking a man down first and apologising afterwards." Don't judge Irishmen by what they did in Dublin—judge them by what they are doing in Flanders.

To anyone who was in the States some years ago when the button craze made you smile, the idea of London following the lead was pretty remote, but now here in London under the guise of charity we have got it bad—only ours are flags, not buttons. We've had four flag-days in the last week when fair ladies, under the plea of helping some doubtless worthy object or other, stopped one in the street and for the sum of one penny and upwards (generally upwards) decorated the lapel of one's coat with a flag or other "strange device."

When the game started I began a collection of the various emblems and on my mantelpiece stands a pincushion fashioned like a black cat (bought to aid some fund) decorated with all sorts of flags.

There is a green flag with a harp on it—a souvenir of our wounded Irish Soldiers' Fund; the blue cross flag which helped our war horses; a flag with the St. George's Cross on one side and a picture of St. George pig sticking at something which we'll assume is a dragon on the other side. This always reminds me of Chester-ton's.

St. George he was for England, And, gallantly set free,
The lady left for dragon's meat,
All tied up to a tree.

An artificial rose reminds me of Queen Alexandra's Hospital collection; a miniature lamp the Florence Nightingale day to help the wounded; a red cross flag for the funds of that society; a lifeboat flag which recalls the sweet Grace Darling that pinned it to my coat.

We all say the thing is being overdone, but we give, and give with a smile and a free hand to the dear girls who decorate us.

I ran across some rare good fellows the other day, men who are training with the new army and some of their tales were great. One that amused me very much was an account of how on a very hot day a route march in full kit was ordered—the men packing their great-coats into their knapsacks and having to march fourteen miles. A Rhodesian who was one of the crowd, substituted his air pillow for his great-coat—and he got away with the deception, too.

The death this week of Uncle Mac, the race horse, calls up some old turf memories. Originally he was, I believe, called Northallerton and belonged to Col. North, but later under his new name won the Chester Cup for Mr. "Teddy" that being the registered name of a partnership, one of the members being E. T. Hooley.

This week will I suppose see Conscription become law and one of the pet follies of the Englishman will, much to his advantage, fade away. I am beginning to hope that the Free Trade bogle will be laid by the heels one of these days and that we shall then get a tariff which will prevent our little Island from becoming again the dumping ground of our commercial rivals.

terably in motor-cars working in groups and able to move rapidly along the coast as soon as warned. The patrolling plane having discovered the approaching Zeppelin and warned the aerodrome, should hang on to the enemy airship and keep it lit up by the rays of its searchlight, thus signalling it to the chasers and land guns.

The principal directions from which Zeppelins attack the British Isles are now well known, and the bulging of the coast of England towards Norwich and that of Scotland towards Peterhead facilitates the establishment there of patrol stations. Captive balloons moored to buoys, provided with wireless and capable of rising to 5,000ft., could also be employed over the sea. Were this double system carefully established it would be impossible for a fleet of Zeppelins to arrive over the English coast without being signalled in time for the defence craft to come up with them and give battle. Once the enemy airships are signalled their arrival unseen over a town should be impossible. And if the battle-planes' anti-aircraft guns are what they ought to be, it would not be possible for the attacking squadron, once caught sight of, to get away without loss of at least one unit.

Mass Air Attacks

Secondly, en route. To attack the Zeppelins en route for England there is practically only one method, that of a similar fleet of airships of the same type, power, and armament. I doubt if Great Britain possesses such a fleet.

Thirdly, before the departure from their depots. To attack the Zeppelins before they start out is a theory dear to Mr. Pemberton-Billing, and he is quite right. The first thing to do is to search the Zeppelins out and attack them in their sheds. But to succeed an expedition of this kind must necessarily sacrifice units. Ought we to hesitate at losing ten aeroplanes, which can be built in a day, and ten airmen if we can destroy two Zeppelins—that is to say, fifty men and the work of twenty days? Up to now these expeditions have been conceived with the object of bringing back the whole fleet of aeroplanes intact. It is like trying to capture a trench without losing a single soldier. What is needed is many machines attacking en masse, descending very low so as to be sure of placing their bombs, and then simply taking their chance like infantrymen.

This is the only way. To fly at 10,000ft. and throw little bombs from time to time is like staying in one's trench and hoping to take an enemy trench by rifle shots. The same thing applies to the destruction of the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen. The day that a hundred machines arrive at the same time over these works and, planing down regardless of defence guns to within 500ft. or 600ft., drop their bombs on the pirates' nest, we may lose many machines, but Germany will lose several Zeppelins.

As to the distance to be covered in going and returning that is easy. It is a question which cannot be discussed in the columns of a newspaper, but I am willing to place at the disposal of the military authorities, who are perhaps already aware of it, the simplest means of employing for this purpose all the existing machines without exception. An expedition of this kind which is a measure of public safety should be organised immediately.

Dilemma Of A Polite Boy

Under this caption The New York Sun prints a communication from "Willie," who confesses himself perplexed, and no wonder. We may doubt the genuineness of "Willie," for most of the messenger boys of New York are grandfathers and those who are not aged and whiskered have found in Battling Levinsky their model of the perfect gentleman. Here is the communication:

"To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: I am very much perplexed, and write to you for information.

"I am a young messenger boy, and my mamma wants me to grow up to be a perfect gentleman. I have occasion to use the elevators in most of the large office buildings down town. Yesterday I entered one in the Equitable Building. A young lady with a beautiful feather boa entered with a young man. He took off his hat. Every other man in the car did the same. Two girls then entered and the car left the ground floor. The two latter got out at the thirty-sixth floor, probably working there. The men all got out at the Bankers' Club, replacing their hats on their heads as they did so.

"What I would like to know is, why these men took their hats off. I have noticed that they do not do it for the girls who work in the building. Was it because the other girl was pretty, or because she wore a white feather boa?

"If it is proper for me to take my cap off in a passenger elevator, should I not take my cap off in a street car in the presence of beautiful ladies with feather boas, and if I see them on the street should not I carry my hat in my hand all the time?

"Maybe I am wrong about the whole thing, and the reason why the men all took their hats off was out of compliment to the man who was going to buy luncheon at the Bankers' Club for a lady.

"Will you please tell me what to do in a case of this kind, as it is very perplexing. I could tell from the expressions on the faces of the men in the car yesterday who took their hats off for the first girl that they were perplexed, too, after the stenographers entered.

"WILLIE."

Commerce and Finance commenting on this letter says: It is to be regretted that newspapers print letters asking questions and then fail to answer them. The Sun never balks at preaching to the high and mighty in politics and in business. It certainly should not hesitate to instruct the lowly and the weak who never heard of Chesterfield yet would be his disciples. Possibly The Sun would find it difficult to answer "Willie's" query. Possibly it would give up as hopeless the problem of why a man will give scant attention to his stenographer down town but raise his hat to her if he meets her up town. One of the things most noticeable today is the decline of courtesy. Most of our boys are boorish. To be slangy appeals to them as being smart. They have little respect for their elders. Civility is at a discount. No doubt the entrance of woman into business in competition with man has done much to bring about the present state of things. Woman is much to blame. Fashion has robbed her of the modesty which should be one of her chief charms. Short skirts and chewing gum, painted cheeks and powdered face have not added to her grace of manner or mind. The world has progressed wonderfully in the last half century industrially and commercially but politeness is becoming a rarity and gentility no longer cherished.

Zeppelin Defence

By M. Georges Prade

(The Distinguished French Aeronautical Expert)

Zeppelins have just made their thirtieth raid on the British Isles. Up to the present only three of these dirigibles have been officially announced as lost on the return journey. It is presumed that the three enemy airships in question were hit by anti-aircraft guns, but not one was brought down on English soil.

In a single case only, that of the Zeppelin which fell in the mouth of the Thames, can it be affirmed with certainty that it was struck. But that is quite sufficient. What has been done once can and ought to be done again and again. All that is needed is to foresee and organise the pursuit of the Zeppelins. To have brought down three Zeppelins is really too feeble an average of success in defence of Great Britain. The greatest difficulty presented by the problem is to signal the approach of Zeppelins in time. They come from over the North Sea, and however numerous the patrol ships may be they represent very few observation posts in comparison with those on the French front. Besides, at the moment when the airships cross the coast lines the noise of the sea prevents the whirring of the motors in the sky being heard. We have, therefore, in front of the points attacked, often near the coast, neither the densely organised zone of observation one finds in France nor the necessary zone of silence.

The first thing to do is to create these. The means of defence against the Zeppelins may be divided into three categories—firstly, above the points attacked; secondly, en route; thirdly, before their departure from their depots.

Firstly, above the points attacked. As the Zeppelins fly at a speed of about sixty miles an hour and at a height of nearly 10,000ft., it is futile to leave the ground to attack them at the moment they are passing overhead. The speediest aeroplane which can carry an arm capable of attacking a Zeppelin takes twenty to thirty minutes to climb 10,000ft. By that time the airship will have disappeared in the night, having travelled from twenty-five to thirty miles. It is therefore necessary to organise, as in Paris, a permanent system of nocturnal aerial patrols. They should fly out at sea at between 7,000ft. and 10,000ft. high, and about twelve to fifteen miles from the coast. They can do this without danger. A machine sixteen miles at sea, at an altitude of 10,000ft., can plane down with the motor stopped a distance ten times greater than its height—that is to say, it would land on terra firma 100,000ft., roughly nineteen miles, away.

Coast Aerodromes

Numerous aerodromes, which need not be very large, but which ought to be made easily recognisable by means of luminous landing marks, should be established all along the east coast. A certain number should also be organised on the west coast, as it is possible that Zeppelins, especially those which fly over Scotland, may make a detour by the north and go down the west coast and fly eastwards, across Scotland, on their way home. Each aerodrome should be provided with a wireless station to link it up with the aeroplanes patrolling at sea. By this means the latter, as soon as a Zeppelin is sighted, would warn the battle-planes, which would have time to rise from the ground and give chase in the direction signalled.

The patrolling and battle-planes ought to be absolutely distinct. The patrolling machines should resemble observation planes, and have a searchlight and wireless signalling apparatus of limited range, in order to be heard only by its receiving post at the aerodrome. The battle-planes, or chasers, have already been fully described in The Daily Mail by Lord Northcliffe. Both these types of machines could be provided with means of landing either on land or sea. For this purpose it is only necessary to fit them, as Caudron did in 1913, with wheels and floats.

The Zeppelins should first be attacked by anti-aircraft guns placed pre-

Are You Still Insurable?

Many a man who had thought himself in the best of health has suddenly discovered, on applying for life insurance, that he was already afflicted with an incipient malady which was bound to terminate fatally at no very distant day.

Statistics compiled by The Insurance Press of New York show that one in nine of all who apply for life insurance are rejected; but this by no means represents the proportion of persons of insurable age who would not now be able to pass a medical examination, though at one time they might have done so.

As to the need of Life Insurance, it takes no argument to convince a man who cannot get it that he needs it.

School of Manners Badly Needed, Says Dorothy Dix

It is announced that the New York University is going to establish a school of manners, and that the degree of M. E.—Magister Eleganflarium—may be conferred on such students as perfect themselves in the etiquette of polite society.

This news sounds almost too good to be true. Let us hope, however, that such a course of study is really to be established in one of our great schools, and that it will be compulsory, for nothing is more sadly needed.

For whether other charms and virtues the American youth may possess, good manners are seldom among them.

On every side we encounter multitudes of men who have intelligence, force, power, men who have achieved success in their own particular calling, but who are as ignorant as babes of any of the graces of human intercourse.

They cannot enter or leave a room without falling over their own feet. They do not know what to say when presented to a stranger, or how either to pay or receive a compliment.

Of course, we excuse such men by saying that they have been too busy with big affairs to give their attention to such small matters. We say that it's more important that a man's heart should be of gold than that he should wear the right sort of coat for the occasion, and we try to gloss over his boorishness by calling him a rough diamond.

All of which is sheer nonsense. Nobody will contend that a rough diamond is as valuable as one that is cut and polished, and the truth is that while a man may succeed without good manners, he would succeed better with them. To know how to do things, to possess what the French call savoir faire, is always a help, never a handicap in life.

People have always appreciated this fact so far as women were concerned. In all girls' schools special attention is paid to deportment, and girls are taught the niceties of etiquette that they perhaps do not have an opportunity to learn in their own homes.

More than that, at home stress is laid on little girls behaving like ladies, and wherever you go the small daughter of the house will receive you charmingly, drop her little courtesy and endeavor to engage you in courteous conversation.

But apparently the mothers of the same families make no effort to instill politeness into their boys, and the lads will storm into the room with their caps on. They will never stop to speak to the visitors, and only grunt by way of reply when addressed.

And when these boys are sent off to school no effort seems to be made to supplement their lack of home training in manners. They are grounded in all the arts and sciences except the most important art and science of all, which is that of making oneself agreeable to one's fellow creatures.

For, when all is said and done, good manners will carry one further than anything, else in the world. They are a letter of credit that every one of us honors at sight. The clown may compel our grudging respect, but we present our hearts as a free gift to the courtier.

A young man may be of the most sterling worth, and yet wear a décolleté collar that exposes his Adam's apple and a coat and trousers and waistcoat of different makes and colors so that he looks like an animated patchwork quilt, but if he and another youth who knew how to dress applied for the same job the good clothes would get it.

A man might be a genius and yet eat peas with his knife, but he would have a hard time getting close enough to those who might help him to get a chance to show what he could do.

A man may have almost super-human ability in any line, but if he is rude and crude in his manners, if he does not know how to please, he lives and dies neglected.

On the other hand, the man who has what we call a charming personality, who is gracious in speech and polite in manners, finds a helping hand always at his elbow and a friendly shoulder ready to boost him up the ladder.

That is why it is so important to teach boys good manners and why the opening of such a department in the New York University is epoch-making.

used as cash in payment of land tax and duties. The interest of the coupons is expressed in term of "big Dollar" and if it is required to be converted the rate of exchange for different districts will be decided and posted in conspicuous places by the various Financial Bureaux concerned.

The Public are requested to read over the detailed regula-
